“ Though I never met Norm personally, I feel like I knew him through you, Beth. I know that he was a good man -- a good husband and father and that his family meant the world to him. I know he was the love of your life and that this tragedy is devastating to you and your children as well as to all of his loved ones and friends. If I had a magic wand to fix this, I would use it in a second. If I thought my words could take away your pain, I would write you a book. From my own experience, I know that words are limited and magic wands don't really exist. I'm sending my love, hugs, and prayers of comfort, and I'll see you on the 29th. I love you.
