“ It is only fitting that I render my remarks on this day that Brenda is put to rest. She, James Garner, and I grew up and played together in the 1940s. We all lived on the same street, about a block from the Elementary School. Although Brenda was a couple of years younger than us, we included her in our group. We normally played in a vacant lot next to Brenda's house - climbing trees, digging tunnels, performing make believe games. Sometimes we would play with our home made toys in the sandy street, which I now believe is called York Street. Brenda was a spunky little girl, always vivacious, and had a big smile on her face. After my mother remarried, we moved away and I lost touch with her. However, when my mom and I would visit Bushnell, we always ventured over to Evans Hardware Store and inquired how she was doing, where she lived, etc. Of course she loved her cats and horses. Later in life we connected up with each other at an All Classes Reunion and got to chat about our in between years and the good ole times. Brenda was a loving and caring person who told me that when we passed, she thought we would go to a "Place of Higher Calling". Rest in peace my good friend, as you will always be loved and remembered.
