“ I knew Carol when she was an instructor in Organizational Effectiveness at the University of Michigan Health System. I took the class "7 Habits of Highly Effective People" with Carol as the instructor. The class was outstanding because of Carol--who managed to make it very real and useful in a way that even Stephen Covey himself on a series of videos that were a part of class, could not! Carol was authentic, kind, engaging, and she made the class so enjoyable. In my mind she was in a class by herself as an instructor/trainer. She touched so many people through her work. I always admired Carol, and was glad for her that she retired a while ago and lived her life beyond the workplace! My sincere sympathy to all who are experiencing the loss of this wonderful person.

“ Carol mentored me as a facilitator of Stephen Covey's "Seven Habits of Highly Effective People" series at UM Health System. I always marveled at her own ingenuity and effectiveness in working with groups within the organization. When high school students were brought in to expose them to health care setting for future career considerations, she could even make the series effective for this entirely different target audience--something that required an entirely different creative approach. She achieved it magnificently. She was personally exceedingly kind and helpful to me as I transitioned to her role. I will never forget that. She transcended any and all departmental competition and consideration to get to the heart of the humanity of the effort. I am very, very saddened to learn of her passing now. Please accept my sincere sympathy. Lynn Hamilton (UM Educational Services for Nursing retiree)

“ Hi Bob, We just wanted to let you know how sorry we are for your loss. When Christy told me, I was in shock. Such an incredible woman gone to soon. When I think of Carol and close my eyes, it is her smile that I remember the most. It so went along with her loving heart, great sense of humor and such an incredible soul. I think of her laughter and feel so blessed that we knew her. Growing up with the Corey's in Detroit was certainly an amazing memory for me and my family. I feel blessed that they were all in our lives. I know you have some amazing memories that you shared with Carol and I know that she is looking down from heaven on all of us. I believe she would not want us to be sad but to celebrate her life. She certainly did have an amazing life. I am sure my parents & hers are with her now and it wouldn't surprise me one bit if my mom has made her incredible spaghetti for them all. Take care Bob Noemi & Tim
