“ Colin Jay Roberts was a friend of mine for over twenty years. I met him in Purdy's, NY in about 1994. We did some carpentry jobs together, and since he had owned a gas station and worked as a car mechanic, he was always great in helping me do some repairs on my car or advise me on what was wrong when it wasn't running right. Most importantly we talked about politics, spiritual growth, and church. We shared experiences of our Christian Faith. Jay is a hero to me. During the last few years of his life, he faced his health challenges with courage, and never gave in to drugs or drinking to ease pain. He didn't have a lot of money, and enjoyed the simple things of life. With plenty of time on his hands toward the end of his life, he spoke to many friends on the phone each day to see how they all were doing. His reminders about the important things were always helpful. His sense of humor brought sunshine to people's days. Congratulations Jay, on a life well lived. Some day I hope to join you walking down the gold-paved road in heaven!
