“ Dear Dad, This is the hardest day so far w/out you! Everyone's saying Happy Fathers Day & it just makes me more sad. I cant even call you! I dont know how to be happy on this day of Dads! I love you & miss you so much! Im glad that you arent suffering any longer. I wasnt able to even say goodbye but Mom said it was better that i didnt see you like you were in the end. I guess its a good thing i didnt but wanted to hug you one last time. ❤️❤️❤️ I Love you,
Heidi

“ Dear Dad, I still cant believe your really gone. Its still so hard for me to accept yet. They say it will get less painful over time, but right now i cant see that ever happening. I hate that you & Mom moved to Florida so I wasnt able to see you as often after that. Holidays were the worst being alone here in Virginia. I never thought I would see the day you all would leave Va & when you did, it was never the same after. I am now planning on moving to Florida to be closer to Mom, I just really hate the thoughts of leaving my Home for good after so many years here. Anyway I had a hard time going back to work after you passed but at least it kept my mind off of it & the kids keep me smiling. I think the hardest part of being a Daddys girl is, you can always call when something goes wrong, now i wont know what to do without you. I miss & love you so much, dont ever forget that. You know I'm not religious but know you are ina better place & watching down over me now. I guess i better start behaving. ;-)

“ Dearest Dolly, We are so sorry to hear of Fred's passing. We all know he is in a much better, happier, healthier place. He is probably the life of the party up there. He always had a good sense of humor and a twinkle in his eye. You and your family are in our thoughts and prayers. Enjoy yourself when you finally get done with all the paperwork. You're awesome. Love, your friends, Shery & Sully
