“ On October 13th, 1980 at 6:54pm Georgan Oliver brought me into this world and for decades after through better and worse, watched over me every way she could. My father was never a part of our lives, and though she had the support of her sister Darlene and her parents Dorothy and George, at the end of the day it was her and I. Growing up she was my foundation, I see in myself so much of her, and though at times I feel my struggle was her's, I am grateful for every memory we shared. I love you mama so much, I'm glad the last words I said to you were, "I love you too". And though I wish I could have been with you when you found freedom, I am glad that you were blessed to return to the source so peacefully and in the way you wanted. I remember your pain, I knew your path better than any other, which is why I love you so much. I will never miss you because everytime I close my eyes you can be there, thank you for the gift of memories that was the period of our lives that we shared. When I was young and got a particularly bad case of influenza, as I layed there in the recliner with my mind burning from the fever, sweating and slipping in and out of awareness, you were sitting over me and behind me rubbing my forehead with a wet rag, in a daze I looked back and the glow of the dining room light was like a halo around your face, you looked like an angel to me, I wish I could have done half as much for you as you did for me. You're home now mama, I look forward with anticipation to when we meet again. Please watch over us who you left behind mama, we will never forget you.
