“ "I will instruct my sorrows to be proud," Constance cries in a magnificent speech in Shakespeare's King John. Despite her words, there is not aristocracy of grief. Grief is a great leveler. There is no highroad out. May "Honey" rest in peace. xx

“ I will always cherish my memories of my Aunt Honey. I was always thrilled on the arrival of our visits to her home and what tales we would hear of Aunt Honey and Uncle Arts adventures and what adventures we may experience; may it be to a zoo, a national park, a brewery, the mint in Denver or an amusement park. Times with her were always a time I will remember for the rest of my life. I find peace to know that you are with my Mother. I LOVE YOU Aunt Honey and Thank you. Love. Cindy

“ I had the pleasure and honor of knowing Honey since Lesley and I were roommates. Honey always treated me like a third daughter, and I appreciated her love and acceptance. Honey was one of a few women that gave me an affectionate and compassionate role model for being a woman, wife and mother. Her laugh was easy and frequent; her attitude was optimistic and engaging. She seemed to be a good listener and gave advice gently and only when asked. I am grateful to have a bit of Honey in my life. I am indebted to her for giving me a dear friend in her daughter Lesley. Gently, she filled a deep need in me at a time when I was especially adrift. With grace, poise and a sense of humor, she generously gave so much and presented a beautiful role model to many of us. I will miss Honey, but she will remain an important presence in my heart. I hope that Art, Lesley and Becky will find peace in their fond memories and funny family legends that can soothe their grief and provide recollections of the joy that Honey offered . With love, Donna

“ I rejoice in my dear Aunt Honey's freedom! Her great spirit of joy and compassion will be missed. She often said to me..... "that my mother, Marge, was a treasure". It takes one to know one.....I can almost hear the laughter between the two of them now!
