“ He will always be my daddy. Even though he reentered my life 12 years or so ago I had a hard time looking at him any other way than a child of five years old looks at her dad. Bigger than life. Always my hero and protector. A great warm man, he will be sorely missed by all those who knew him well. I love you dad and know you will be with me always. I hear your voice and know your heart. “ The respect I have always had for a man who walked his own path in his own strides in shoes of his own making cannot be put into words. There is a great many people who considered this man a true hero and benefactor that at a different time would flood this page so completely that this post may never even be read. He was my only hero, and I called him dad. I will miss you, you were my best and sometimes only true friend. I pray that you and mom are together now, free of all the insanity so that you can just bask in the joy you tried to give all of us. Bye pop. I'll see you again someday. Love Michael.....
