“ Miss Judy, or Mrs. J, as we got to calling her, embraced our family wholly from the moment that her darling daughter Precia married our wonderful brother Paul. While I don't always remember meeting people, Judy made an impression at once; I was never a stranger to her, simply a beloved family member she finally got to meet. That quiet way of loving is what I will remember most about Mrs. J., how anyone in her circle knew they were embraced and cared about, how she could be relied upon to lend a hand, no questions asked. And her Italian cream cake and seven-layer salad were a welcome hallmark of our family gatherings. The world is less joyous without her, but our memories of time with her will never fade.
