“ My mentor, my dearest friend, I miss you. Life will not be the same without you. The most caring of nurses, the most professional of mentors for newer nurses, I learned so much from you. Anything I do right as a nurse is attributed to you. Anything I do right as a friend is attributed to you. Truly one in a million and a rare gem. I love you and take inspiration from your life. You will be in my heart forever.-Rosanne

“ My mother's entire life is filled with small acts of kindness. She took in the homeless and cleaned them up before her shift at the hospital in New York. All her daughter's friends knew her well from grade school to college as the loving, caring mother they also went to for support, love and advice. She was always helping and training nurses on how to care for patients and taught them that you will always treat the illness as it comes with being a nurse, but it is the care and nurturing of the patient that will be the one act that will never be forgotten. For the daughters and grandchildren, no holiday or event was too small to receive a card, gift and phone call from her to ensure they felt special and honored. She sent care packages to doctors at the hospital that were homesick and missing their family. She cooked amazing meals for her family and friends and made sure there was extra food and tupperware for everyone to take and enjoy on another day. You could call her any day or night and ask for advice and the compassion and attentiveness she gave to all the details were always comforting, supportive and loving. After her passing, I found a quote she kept with her from Mi Sun that I placed on the Mass Cards and the last statement reads "...all the little things we do for one another is the most significant thing you and I might do in our lifetime." This quote embodies her entire life as it was filled with acts of kindness. So please know that I see her dancing with her Daddy right now, who she missed so much, and hugging and kissing her Mom and sister Joan while God is smiling at her because the angel he had working miracles here on earth is now by his side. I love and miss you so much Mom, I hope I become half the person you were. Love your first daughter, Tara.
