“ To the Family, this is something i wrote awhile back but hopefully this will bring you all some reassurance. As a man walked up an old mountain road he heard a voice say, "My son come home, leave that body behind, join me and my kingdom, for the pain you feel today will no longer be there tomorrow." And the man cried, " but my family needs me, I can't leave them alone." Then the voice said " My child, you're only leaving in the physical sense. The heart is like an ocean, it can never get to full, so in their hearts you will remain and they will see you never left." So the man continued to travel up the road, but he no longer felt alone and his heart filled with reassurance that this was a journey he would have to continue on his own, but he woud never be alone. For in his heart was the love he had for his family for all those years and that was something that would never disappear.
