Her ancestor, Count Odette Philippe, was one of the first European settlers on the shores of north Tampa Bay, in an area that is now Safety Harbor in Pinellas County. She was born and grew up in Safety Harbor where her father, George Booth, served as Mayor. She went to high school in Clearwater where she met her husband, Howard. Her main commitments were to the First United Methodist Church of Clearwater, the Junior League and helping with the Girl Scout troops in which Joan was active. Marion loved cooking, spending time at the beach, boating, and traveling. From an early age, Marion enjoyed spending vacations in the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina. She was a great cook and prepared the seafood Howard caught. The house and lawn were filled with friends and food most weekends. Everything from oyster roasts and fish-frys to Greek dinners and Cuban specialties were very special for all family and friends. One of her most popular dishes was the Greek preparation for red fish covered in vegetables and served over rice. She called it "psari plaki."
