“Richie, it's been almost 2 years. I'm laying in bed and can't sleep because I was thinking of you...putting some thoughts down here seemed like it might make me feel a bit better. I miss you. I miss your hilarious laugh. I miss talking on the phone - sometimes you were so overwhelmed and overtaken with your emotions that we would just sit on the phone so you could talk it out. I'm heartbroken that our son will not get to grow up knowing you alive...that he won't have memories with you. I don't want to do this on my own, Richie. We need you. I selfishly need my friend back. Our boy looks like you, back hair and all. He has your eyes, and your face, and your smart-mouth...but I'm working on that!

Please be with us, Richie. Please stay with Cooper and I however you can and whenever you can. Please help guide Cooper to make the right choices in life. He's a great kid...he's growing up way too fast but would make you so proud.

I love you, Richie. I always have. And I'll never stop. You gave me amazing memories, and the best son I could have ever prayed for. Save us a spot when God calls us home too.

Forever,
Katie (and Cooper)

“ Richie
I have so many memories of you. I met you when you played pop warner football. Went to the same high school. Socialized in the same bar on occasion. You were the cutest sweetest young boy! I am so sorry that your life was taken from you so early but I believe you will live again. My memories of you are silly and kind and fun! I had asked Jason Walker about you like maybe a week or two before you passed. I was asking if you boys were still making music. I was more than shocked to find out you passed because I wanted to catch up. Ive been gone so long. I hope you find excitement, love, mystery, and wonder where your soul roams now peace is overrated. Live on friend. -Shayna
