32 ½ years ago you gave a lot of people their 1st additional name. My brother (your dad) was now “Dad”, my dad was now “Papa”, and I became Aunt Karrie. When I found out your dad was going to be a father, I was excited for 2 reasons, 1- I got to be an aunt and 2- your dad was going to get back all the hell he raised as a kid LOL. They always say your kids give you back what you gave your parents 10-fold. I knew your dad was about to meet his match and Sierra you didn't let me down LOL. When you came into our lives you brought so much joy, love and energy. Now you were a smart mouth little brat (with love) but you got everyone's attention when you came into the room. Your Dad loved the little girl who made him smile and chase! You were your mom's little princess and peasant (lol). You were so full of life and energy when you were little, did I mention the energy LOL. I was so proud of you for being yourself even when you got into high school, you pushed your way through and graduated!! Your dad's heart pounded when he watched you walk across that stage! The older you got the more independent you became. Lord was you INDEPENDENT, stubborn, hardheaded and did everything Sierra's way. You had a rough life, and you fought some tough battles. Some battles were won and some were lost but I must admit you stayed strong and you never let the world get the best of you. One thing we all had to learn was addiction is a disease. A disease that eats the entire family. You gave that battle the BIGGEST fight but unfortunately that fight took your life. Now you can rest easy Babygirl, the fight is no longer yours to handle. It's time for you to fly high with the angels. We all miss you so much Sierra and we love you forever and always.

Well put. I got to experience some of that hard headed ness first hand. Lol but if she loved you she loved you big. She was there for me through some of my hardest moments and I wish I could have been there for her. She was a kid with a big heart and will be missed by so many. Love you Sierra. Rest easy kiddo.
